CLUBBED TO DEATH.

The Brutal Conduct of a New York Policeman.

NEW YORK, October 3.—MAX Aronson, fifty years old, a Hester street grocer, was brutally clubbed by Policeman Wood, of this city, in his store on Wednesday last, and died today. The police have been unable to take his testimony, but found the said man extremely unconscious and dying. According to the statement of his son, and the physician,

the clubbing was one of the worst cases of political violence reported for years. They say a boy tried to steal some fruit, but was ordered away by the old grocer. The boy's mother, Mrs. Wood, took the woman's part, and accused

Aronson of striking her, following his words

by clubbing him. His skull was fractured.

The two sons interfered, and driving the elder way, called a physician. While the physician was caring for the old man,

Policeman Wood returned to the scene, and brutally clubbed the old man again. The two sons drove him back and returned and took the old man away from the physician and locked him up, with the whole family for forty-five hours. After their release on bail, Max Aronson began to sink and died today.

TEMRS GROWING SCARCE.

Charleston Rapidly Resuming its Normal

Conditions.

CHARLESTON, S.C., October 3.—There have been no shocks here in the past forty-eight hours, and only a few small fires at Summerville.

The weather was pleasant to-day, and cool enough for light overcoats and fires. Religious services were held by all the congregations. The Presbyterians held a union meeting at Westminster, and the other congregations worshipped wherever practical buildings.

Totally bent, a hundred excursionists arrived by the Atlantic coast line, many coming from Richmond, Washington and Baltimore.

The proceeds of the excursion will be turned over to the relief fund by the Atlantic coast line and connecting roads joining in the excursion.

General Vela on Hand.

MEXICO CITY, Mex., October 3.—General

Vela with six hundred men of the Fifth and Twenty-sixth infantry, arrived here yesterday and will take command of the military departments of the Rio Bravo tomorrow. The rest of his troops will shortly arrive here, and the Fourth Infantry, now here, will go to San Juan de los Lagos, while the cavalry regiments will be formed in one corps under Colonel Motiñan

Hinojosa, and Colon Cavalos and Hernandez put on writing orders. General Gomez, as soon as traffic is resumed over the railroads, will go to the City of Mexico, and thence to Tampico.

The Cotton Tax.

WESCHING, October 3.—The president of the national cotton planters' association has addressed a circular letter to the governors of the states, asking their co-operation in efforts to secure the return of the sixty odd million dollars collected illegally directly after the war, and known as the "cotton tax."

The Second Louisiana District.

NEW ORLEANS, October 3.—The democrats of the second district have nominated M. D.

Logan for congress.

THE ANSWER TO KAULBARS.

He Will Ask for a More Definite Reply To-day.

SOFIA, October 3.—General Kaulbars having again asked for a reply to his ultimatum, the ministry today (Sunday) after a long discussion, drafted a reply to the effect that the Bulgarian government would comply with the demands of Russia to the extent that the constitution and laws would permit. It was expected that when this reply is delivered tomorrow, General Kaulbars would make a more precise answer. A new paper, the "Bulgarian," Bulgaria, the first number of which has just appeared, makes a violent attack on Russia and General Kaulbars, and opposes the liberation of the imprisoned conspirators, saying the people would stone them to death if they were captured.

RICHMOND, Va., October 3.—Delegates of the Knights of Labor national assembly have been arriving steadily all day, and very many strange faces may be seen on the streets. Among the latest arrivals are the delegations from districts numbered 49, New York, who came by steamer to Newport on Saturday, and thence to Richmond by rail, and the Milwaukee delegation. The principal churches were well attended by the visitors. Grand Master Workman, General Secretary, and his wife, General Secretary, attended high mass at St. Peter's cathedral. He was accompanied by Messrs. Muller and Hayes of the national executive committee, who had come to attend the meeting of the conference of states, and the Knights of Labor national assembly, which was to be held at the same time.

Mr. Powdery, a delegate from New York, who has kept up the greater portion of the day in receiving visitors but to-night has given up all except

General Secretary Turner and the members of the executive committee. The can makers of Baltimore, numbering several hundred, arrived this afternoon on a steamer, acting as an escort to the Baltimore delegation. They marched, preceded by a band, to Ford's hotel, where they left the delegation, and the executives of the Knights of Labor, and left for Baltimore. There we always have about eight or nine hundred delegates here, besides a large number of non-delegates. The executive committee has not held its session yet, but will do so tomorrow morning before the national assembly is called to order. The meeting will be for the arrangement of preliminaries.

Demonstrations in Spain.

MADRID, October 3.—At a bull fight performance this afternoon, a portion of the audience displayed banners, inscribed "Long live Alfonso!" and "Prisoners for prisoners," "Long live the Queen," etc. The whole audience applauded the demonstration.

GOD SAVE IRLAND.

DEBENHAM, October 3.—The local Lieutenant of Ireland and his wife went to the Gaol, theater, this city, last evening. They were cheered by the people in the lower part of the house, while those in the gallery shouted, "God save Ireland."

GOULD AND MOROSINI.

Fifteen years of Confidential Relations Ending in Coldness.

NEW YORK, October 3.—[Special.]—For fifteen years or more Signor P. P. Morosini was a favorite in New York society, and in those years Morosini made something like three millions of dollars by following Mr. Gould's advice. Morosini was in the Erie railroad offices on a starvation salary when he started Mr. Gould's attention, and the stories about his being of noble Italian birth and of high education, and his great talents, and his services to Gould were of the most confidential sort, and Morosini was as jealous of Gould's friendships and confidences as is a lover of his sweethearts' glances. When, therefore, Gould began to court his son, George, and George began to do the work that Morosini had been doing, George having a hatred for Gould that dates back to Europe.

Morosini's troubles with Gould were of his daughter have aged him very considerably, and have made him penurious and disagreeable. He still has a desk in Connor's office where he sits daily, taking care of his three millions of dollars, and the management of his business, but he is not a good manager. He is not a good husband, and his wife and his son are both unhappy.

PRESIDENT Fitzgerald, of the Irish National League, has issued an appeal to the American people urging them to contribute toward the assistance of the Irish people in resisting eviction.

OWING to a press of matter, an unforeseen accident in the press-room, and the inferior quality of white paper on hand, Sunday's edition of THE CONSTITUTION did not get out until a late hour in the day. Such accidents do not often occur, but when they do they are fully as annoying to the managemen, as the failure of the paper to reach its patrons is vexatious to them.

A CORRESPONDENT of the St. Louis Republican, writing from St. Paul, tells a startling story about the death of Emery A. Storts, the great Chicago lawyer. In brief, the dispatch states that Storts demanded a hundred thousand dollars as a fee in the Mackin case; that Mackin insisted his associates, "the gang," should furnish the funds or he would "squeal"; that Storts, as Mackin's attorney, obtained complete possession of all "the gang's" secrets; that this made it necessary to "settle him;" that the job was placed in the hands of two men, and that they poisoned him with digitalis.

Wild Northwestern View.

The Chicago Times, which has been practically a dead paper since the death of Willard F. Story, has some views about state banks. These views are precisely such as we should expect a dead paper to express. They are based on an ignorance that is dense enough to be entirely worthy of the medium through which they are supposed to reach the public. Commenting on some of the arguments which THE CONSTITUTION has advanced in favor of state banks, the dead Chicago paper remarks:

That is something very nice to have, to be sure. One can easily imagine how an admirable state bank system would have been in Georgia if it were issued by state banks and secured (sic) by Georgia bonds. Such a currency wouldn't stay off very far, because of a person's respectable information would touch it. If a Georgian wanted to go out of his state he would have to provide himself with some other kind of money, whether to pay his taxes or to buy his bread. And yet other kinds of Georgians were supplied with Georgia money, they would find themselves in a protectionist paradise—living within themselves.

The remains of the Times then proceeds to reply to its own statement as follows:

In another respect THE CONSTITUTION is mistaken. Under the old state bank chaos (system it was not) the alleged money did not stay around home and come up nights—not if the banks issuing the stuff could prevent. The issuers used to swap their notes and get them back again, and so on, in a way from home as possible. An issuer in say Wisconsin, would, if he could, swap his wildcats for the red-dogs of an issuer in Missouri. Not infrequently the issuing bank had no place of business except on paper. The nominal place of business was as likely as not to be in the midst of an uninhabited wilderness, or in some impenetrable part of the earth extending through Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont, and quotes Professor Brigham as "not being sanguine about New England being a safe place to live in." Others refer to a great depression in the Atlantic along the coast of the United States. Some years ago I took a few notes concerning the deep sea soundings taken by the oceanographic expeditions showing this great depression, and perhaps they may be of interest to your readers.

THE RUPTURED EARTH.

Cracks in the Crust in New England—A Big Channel in the Atlantic Ocean's Bed.

In referring to the recent earthquake which occurred in the interior of the earth

extending through Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont, and quotes Professor Brigham as

"not being sanguine about New England being a safe place to live in."

Others refer to a great depression

in the Atlantic along the coast of the United States. Some years ago I took a few notes concerning the deep sea soundings taken by the oceanographic expeditions showing this great depression, and perhaps they may be of interest to your readers.

There seems to be a deep channel or chasm through the Atlantic bed from the eastward of a large portion of the northward and westward, and following toward the southward turns abruptly to the eastward opposite the maritime, G. and widening, passes some distance south of Newfoundland. This chasm is very deep, averaging 3,500 fathoms, or 21,000 feet, while the side walls in L.S. fathoms, or 12,000 feet, are nearly vertical, and the water is much deeper than those of the spring marshes.

Unless a closet is ventilated so that there is some circulation of air through it is no place to hang up a coat or a garment, and it is not a place where a person would be safe, unless he has been dried, so that the perspiration, perhaps, has been dried.

DE DIED GAME.

One of the Compact Little Romances of the Great West.

From Drake's Magazine.

It was out in Arizona. An outfit had come on to do some work on the new barracks at the fort, and they were an orderly set, you bet. They were getting $2.50 a day, and when orders came out from headquarters to scrub things at the post they up and struck for $1.50 a day, and when the contractor mounted his mustang and rode over to where the gang was hanging out. I happened to be what's the row here?" says Jim.

"We can't work for no $2.50," says the leader.

"What do you mean by that?"

"Struck, you have!" Struck! Get to work; every blanked one of you. The first man that says strike to me is a son of a gun. I'll make you strike."

"Struck, you have!" says the red-haired, red-shirted, ugly mugged leader. "If there's any shoozin' going on, I'm a son of a gun."

"I'm a son of a gun, day for being in the target box, and I dropped fast as a pancake."

The contractor mounted his leveled dead at the man, and the gang sat in his gun.

"Red shirt, sit down at the first shot, with your back to me."

Up he hopped on his left elbow; then he hopped away, while the contractor did some lively dogging, that was the name of three dogs.

"I reckon it's an ugly one, Doc! Dead sure thing, eh?" says Jim, looking at the gang.

"I'm a son of a gun, day for being in the target box, and I dropped fast as a pancake."

At our Tuesday, October 1, at 10 o'clock, p.m., on the corner of Peachtree and Whitehall Streets, a most valuable and desirable piece of urban real estate on Peachtree street, situated at the intersection of Peachtree and West Peachtree streets, both of which are fine wide streets, and bounded by the two largest and finest buildings around it. Horse cars on one side and a splendid drive on the other. On the lot are fine shade trees, lawns, flower beds, and the building sites, as shown on the plan of the reservation on file in this office. (About 22,000 cubic yards.)

The price will be stated per cubic yard.

The buyer has the right to reject any or all bids and to waive defects.

Blank proposals and instructions to bidders, terms, etc., will be furnished on application to this office.

Envelopes containing proposals must be marked "Proposals for Grading," and addressed to the undersigned.

J. W. ACOOM, Captain and A. G. M. U. S. A.
